¿How much does it cost to attend a UWC School?

The selection process is made based on merit and potential, not based on the financial capacity of each student. However, colleges have access to limited resources to support students who could not otherwise attend UWC Colleges. This financial aid can range from 5% to 100% of the cost of tuition but under no circumstances does it cover all costs. That is, regardless of the type of financial aid offered by each college, students have to collect funds locally to cover expenses such as passport, visa, and health insurance.

Financial aid is allocated directly by each college depending on the parents' income and funding from external sources available each year. It is also important to remember that not all applicants receive financial assistance and that each year spaces are offered to applicants who have been successful during the selection process and who are able to pay full tuition.

In all cases, students and their families assume the responsibility of paying the schools directly. Additionally, before the student travels to the respective school, the parents sign an agreement specifying their financial responsibilities with the organization and with the national committee.
